2. This year’s focus is on trenchless rehabilitation technologies, which have become essential for addressing the aging infrastructure in India’s cities. These methods offer a sustainable, non-invasive approach to renewing water, sewer, and gas pipeline minimizing surface disruption, reducing environmental impact, and extending asset life with minimal downtime. While rehabilitation remains the top priority, moderate priority trenchless installations are also critical for developing future-ready cities. The show will explore cutting-edge techniques for faster, cleaner, and cost-efficient utility deployment, helping meet the demands of expanding urban populations.

3. Through this international platform, IndSTT invites global experts, technology innovators, and Indian Subcontinent utility stakeholders to collaborate, exchange knowledge, and build the sustainable underground infrastructure of tomorrow.
